Brandt-Roberts Galleries is pleased to announce the exhibition, Under Construction, featuring paintings by internationally acclaimed, and Ohio- based artist Terry Rodgers.

"Everything is always under construction... the internet, fashion, our cities, our lives." — TR

Terry Rodgers' current work focuses on portraying body politics. His large-scale paintings are a compression and dissection of our rampant imaginations and meditated influences. But, Rodgers goes beyond the representational working in a variety of other media from exuberant and visceral sculptures in bronze, to playful mixed media sculpture, to his gestural drawings and small paintings, to inventive constructed archival prints, and more. Together, his body of work forms a deliberately disorienting constructed whole. He has accumulated a huge stash of his own photographs, drawings, and found images to create an unexpected take on contemporary life and the texture of our world.

Rodgers is an internationally recognized artist whose first solo European museum exhibition opened in 2009. His work has been in Art Basel, and three of his monumental figurative canvases were in the Biennale al de Valencia. He has had solo gallery exhibitions throughout the United States and Europe. Several books about his work have been published including a new comprehensive book due out in 2023. In 2017, Rodgers collaborated with the esteemed French glass company, Lalique. Only a handful of contemporary artists have been chosen to work with Lalique. The resulting Sirènes crystal vase was honored with the Land Rover Born Award.
